Crotched Mountain board chair Jim Varnum and president and CEO Mike Coughlin take puzzle-making instruction from student Julian.
FROM THE MOMENT we welcome a new student or client, we are thinking about their future and how we can prepare them to transition back to their homes and communities. We believe the best education and care plans are focused on both now and later, so that we are always working toward the next successful transition on the road to maximum independence—from today to tomorrow, school to work, and rehabilitation to home.

When our students graduate, some move on to extended learning or job training; others transition to new communities of living appropriate to their age and interests. Clients who desire to live independently in their own homes work with care managers to determine which services they’ll need to ensure their optimal happiness, health and safety. These transitions are a natural flow for everyone we serve; they represent pathways to growth, learning and healing—milestones we celebrate with them.

Our Cedar’s Point program, for example, is a residential model that works with adolescents needing to acquire important skills like managing difficult emotions, problem solving, and following through on expectations. With one-to-one teaching and staff support, these teens learn skills that are the building blocks of healthy, successful, and independent lives.

Transitioning to a system of services that support health and safety at home can feel daunting. Fortunately, Crotched Mountain Community Care’s professional care managers oversee the services that ensure clients enjoy quality of life in the comfort of familiar surroundings. Whether clients require home safety evaluations, modifications and equipment, or require more support through health aides and meal services, they and their families can enjoy peace of mind knowing their needs are met along a comprehensive continuum of care.

This year, we celebrated a combined 30+ years of service from Don Shumway, former president and CEO, and Dr. W. Carl Cooley, former chief medical officer. We stand on the shoulders of those who came before us and offer our enduring gratitude to both Don and Carl for their vision, passion, and commitment to our mission. Their initiatives laid the foundation for the successes we celebrate in these pages, as well as new pathways that will best serve the changing needs of our students, clients, and their families.

With expanded community connections and exciting innovations in teaching and communication, we look back with gratitude for all that you—a valued member of our community of ambassadors and philanthropists—have helped us accomplish, while we look ahead with optimism. Simply said, today’s celebrations and tomorrow’s dreams are possible because of your intellectual and financial support.

Along with your support, we ask for your ideas. Join our dedicated staff in the drafting of new directions to meet the changing needs of our students and clients by sending your comments to info@crothedmountain.org.

PRESIDENT AND CEO
Darren Discenzo at his day job. His other work is “sitdown” comedy at venues in New England and New York, including Dangerfield’s in Manhattan.
A COMEDIAN
GETS SERIOUS ABOUT INDEPENDENCE
I was in my house the other day and accidentally fell out of my chair, and I’m telling you guys right now that Enterprise Car Rental is full of it, because I called them and they will not come and pick you up. They just laugh at you!”

That’s just one of the bits from the gently self-deprecating comedy act Darren Discenzo performs at venues throughout New England and New York. His “chair” is a power wheelchair that he’s been using since his car collided with a moose when he was 26, injuring the C5 vertebra on his spinal cord. “I came around the corner and there was a 1,000 pound moose straddling the yellow line,” he remembers. “I took out the moose’s back legs, it dropped on the roof, and all the impact was on my neck. I could still feel my hands on the wheel, but as hard as I tried, I couldn’t move anything.”

He was taken to Dartmouth-Hitchcock Hospital in Lebanon, NH, and after his condition stabilized, Discenzo spent three months at HealthSouth Rehabilitation Center in Concord. Because his spinal cord was not completely severed, doctors couldn’t tell him exactly what to expect. He was paralyzed from the neck down, but every day he worked hard with his therapists, and every night he lay in bed, willing himself to move, certain he could feel his muscles starting to fire.

“Because I had that feeling, I just had to prove everyone wrong,” he says. “Some people call it determination, others call it stubbornness, but if someone tells me I can’t do something, it just makes me work that much harder.”

Right before he was released from rehab, Discenzo was able to get his legs to twitch, and when he returned home to his parents’ house, Crotched Mountain Community Care (CMCC) equipped him with the tools to maintain his fierce independence. Through the Harry Gregg Foundation, a foundation supported by Crotched Mountain, CMCC secured a grant to install a wheelchair ramp at the entrance to the Discenzos’ home and arranged for an aide from Granite State Independent Living to help Darren shower, shave and dress.

“When he first came home, CMCC made all the difference because my husband was still working full time and I was the main caregiver,” says Darren’s mother, Graceanne Discenzo. “They put us in touch with so many resources that we just weren’t aware of—from visiting nurses and therapists to adaptive appliances and even special eating utensils.”

Discenzo continued to make progress in outpatient therapy and by 2009 he was able to lift himself out of his wheelchair and use a walker for short periods. He moved into his own house, where a spare bedroom was converted into an accessible bathroom. CMCC helped him get and learn to use a Hoyer lift so he could have full and independent access in his home.

“This was really the goal Darren had been working toward. He has a strong work ethic and kind heart, which “Laughter can absolutely heal. It’s very therapeutic.”

—Darren Discenzo

truly make him an inspiration to all those around him. We were thrilled for him when he was able to truly regain his independence,” notes Debra.

The determined Discenzo also made mental adaptations that enhanced his independence. When he eventually returned to work at his family’s hardware store, which they recently sold to the Aubuchon chain, he couldn’t assist customers as easily as he once did, so “he developed almost a photographic memory,” says Grace Discenzo. “He can sit behind the cash register and tell you exactly in which aisle and where on the shelf any item is.”

Aubuchon’s management was so impressed with his skills and work ethic that they dedicated their new Lancaster, New Hampshire, store to him.

Sometimes his self-reliant streak has landed him in trouble, like when he got stuck for twelve hours after falling from his chair and ended up in the hospital with severe kidney damage. “Yeah, I didn’t think I needed a medical alert system because I always had my phone,” he says, with an easygoing laugh. After that, CMCC connected him with Life Line, and he now wears a life-saving medical alert pendant around his neck.

An aide still comes to Discenzo’s home to help him with cleaning, laundry, grocery shopping, food prep and exercising, and whenever his wheelchair needs repairs, “CMCC is always there to help expedite things,” he says. “When you rely on something every day and it’s out of commission, it can be a huge pain.”

In addition to CMCC, Discenzo’s sense of humor has been instrumental in his journey toward independence. Even when he was still in the hospital, he was the one cheering everyone else up, and when one of his outpatient physical therapists took him to a local open-mic comedy night, he won a $50 prize. His next stop was Mohegan Sun Resort, where he placed third in a comedy contest. He still performs regularly, drawing huge laughs as he pokes fun at the absurdity of his situation.

Service with a smile—Darren combines knowledge and humor for exceptional customer service.
IT’S ALL
MAKING THE CONNECTION

Jeremiah Aquino
could be on a poster
of the quintessential
six-year-old: energetic,
with a dark brown buzz cut,
dancing eyes, and an infectious jack-o-lantern grin.
JEREMIAH FINGERS A CLUMP OF GREEN PUTTY as he snuggles into his mother, Jessica. She asks him a few questions about his day and smiles as she deciphers his answer.

“One of the things we’re working on is having a conversation,” says Jessica. “The only time he talks to me now is when he wants something. I want to teach him to have a back-and-forth exchange.”

The Aquino family moved to New Hampshire from Queens, New York when Jeremiah was only a year old.
Jessica had noticed some differences between Jeremiah and her older daughters at the same age, “but I thought, maybe he’s just ignoring me. Maybe that’s how boys are,”
she explains. When Jeremiah was seventeen months old, she experienced a shock of recognition while answering a developmental questionnaire at a routine check-up. From lack of eye contact to toe walking to “stimming” (repetitive body movements), Jeremiah exhibited many of the symptoms of autism.

“My heart sank. I was devastated, and I felt like it was my fault because I worked so many hours,” says Jessica. “But after I got past that, I thought, ‘What can I do to be the best mom I can be by being his advocate?’”

But finding services for Jeremiah proved to be a challenge. Jessica was struck by the contrast with New York, where, she says, programs through schools, hospitals, and private organizations were more plentiful and publicized. The family considered returning to New York—Jessica’s job as the chief operations officer for a large nonprofit was still based there—but decided that they were committed to raising their children in the “less crazy” environment of the Granite State.

Looking beyond the public school system where Jeremiah was receiving services, the Aquinos found Crotched Mountain’s Ready, Set, Connect! (RSC) treatment program through Jeremiah’s speech pathologist. Jessica was impressed with RSC’s thorough evaluation of her son. “I was pleased because their evaluation revealed new focus areas that weren’t being addressed,” she recalls.

“We use an assessment tool that analyzes typical language and learning milestones to help us identify bar-rriers,” explains Tina Chait, Lead Therapist. “This informs Jeremiah and ABA (Applied Behavior Analysis) therapist Lindsey Konkol use flash cards to practice labeling skills.

our treatment plan and enables us to zero in on very specific areas such as listening, requesting, labeling and play and social behaviors.”

Since August 2016, Jeremiah has been attending RSC in Manchester every day from 9:00 to 3:00, and even in a few short months the change has been dramatic. Before RSC, he was using two-to-three word sentences, and it was a challenge to get him to engage. Now, says, Jessica, not only is his vocabulary expanding, but, “He’s making connections he’s never made before, initiating imaginative play and actually saying things like, ‘I love rice and beans!’ The other day he built a little mushroom house out of play dough, brought his little Smurf over and said, ‘Look, I made a house for a Smurf!’”

“Jeremiah has reached a majority of milestones in his current treatment plan. He can name many items and request things he needs such as a spoon for his yogurt,” Chait points out. “And his fine motor skills continue to improve.”

Jessica credits RSC’s Applied Behavioral Analysis (ABA) model, which gives Jeremiah intensive one-on-one training in skills such as making eye contact, listening, and imitating. The small-group interactions with other children have also been enormously beneficial. “Jeremiah used to keep to himself at the public school, and it’s been so cool to watch him go up to other kids with a toy and say, ‘Let’s play,’” Jessica says.

Regular communication with the RSC staff is something else the Aquinos appreciate. In addition to exchanging daily written reports, they meet with teachers once a month to discuss Jeremiah’s progress, challenges, and goals they’re working toward. “There’s not one question or concern I’ve had that the team hasn’t tackled immediately,” she says. “And if they don’t have the answer, they always point me in the right direction. That’s the kind of support parents need when a child has autism.”

“We strive for collaboration and consistency with family, other educators and therapists who are also working with the children at Ready, Set, Connect!” says Chait. “We do whatever it takes for kids like Jeremiah to reach their full potential.” Jeremiah will return to public school next year, and Jessica feels he will have a good foundation for first grade. The RSC team will work with her to create an Individualized Education Program (IEP) for him, so his teachers next year can help continue his trajectory of success.

In the meantime, Jeremiah will continue to delight in the activities of a six-year-old—exploring the outdoors for ladybugs and butterflies, singing, and playing pranks on his family. “I can never fully be a part of his world,” says Jessica. “But seeing him become more present and engaged in ours has been amazing.”

“Seeing him become more present and engaged has been amazing.”

Crotched Mountain’s accessible trails were featured in an episode of the Emmy-winning series Windows to the Wild, produced by New Hampshire Public Television. The 30-minute show, Hiking for All, which premiered January 2016 on NHPTV PRIME, featured host Will Lange and hikers as they followed accessible hard-pack pathways, boardwalks, moderate grades, switchbacks and rest stops along the Gregg and Dutton Brook Trails. The program highlighted how the trails give people of all abilities the opportunity to experience the outdoors—from panoramic views of sky and mountains to the scents and sounds of deep woods and wetlands.

Hiking for All

Crotched Mountain Foundation joined with the New Hampshire Association for the Blind to co-host a special screening of two, half-hour episodes of Windows to the Wild—Birding by Ear and Hiking for All, produced by New Hampshire Public Television (NHPTV) in May at ConVal High School in Peterborough, NH. The screening was followed by a discussion on making outdoor experiences accessible to everyone moderated by Phil Vaughn of NHPTV and producer of Windows to the Wild and featuring panelists Geoff Garfinkle, Crotched Mountain director of therapeutic recreation; Peter Jensen, accessible trail developer; Michael Lang, adaptive sports facilitator; New Hampshire Association for the Blind; Francie Von Mertens, birding expert and nature columnist; and Laura Clark, co-founder and program coordinator, Wheelchair Health in Motion (WHIM).

Hockey Heroes Play for CM

Long time CM partners, the Boston Bruins Alumni, faced off against the Crotched Mountain Wild to raise funds and awareness for Crotched Mountain Accessible Recreation and Sports program (CMARS). Five hundred fans attended the Sixth Annual Bruins Alumni Classic at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, raising $41,560 to benefit the many community-based programs offered by CMARS including adaptive skiing, kayaking, cycling and more.

Golfing for Good

The 14th Annual Crotched Mountain Golf Classic raised $55,000 for the programs and services of Crotched Mountain. Thirty-six teams gathered for 18 holes of golf followed by a reception featuring remarks by Eliza Factor, parent of Crotched Mountain School student Felix. A raffle, auction and prizes rounded out a fun and successful event. Thank you to all our sponsors, players and volunteers!

New Ways to See

Crotched Mountain School student photography was featured in an exhibit at the Monadnock Center for History and Culture in Peterborough, NH, during October and November 2015. New Views from the Mountain featured students’ work with artist-in-residence, COURTNEY BENT, an award-winning photographer based in Durham, NH. Their work focused on new ways of seeing and included photos of everyday items with an emphasis on unusual angles, textures, shadows and light.

Perfect Pitch

Vocalist and musician CHRISTOPHER DUFFLEY serenaded and inspired audience members at Crotched Mountain as part of the Hillard Lecture Series. A native of Manchester, NH, Duffley is a 14-year-old multi-instrumentalist and singer who is also blind and has autism. He is well-known for performing the national anthem for audiences at Fenway Park, New Hampshire International Speedway, Delta Dental Stadium, and at conferences and events nationwide. Duffley also sang the national anthem at Crotched Mountain’s Bruins Alumni Classic benefit hockey game. In addition to live performances, Duffley produces a weekly podcast called Mission Possible, and has also released two albums of inspirational music. His performances have received millions of views on YouTube and GodTube. In 2013, Autism Speaks named him one of 10 Amazing Individuals With Autism Who Shined.

Ready, Set, Connect! in Manchester

Crotched Mountain Foundation marked the official opening of the Manchester, NH, location for its Ready, Set, Connect! Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA) program with a ribbon cutting ceremony in March. DENNIS BRADLEY, BCBA and executive director of Ready, Set, Connect! welcomed guests, and SENATOR LOU D’ALLESANDRO offered brief remarks on the importance of bringing ABA therapy to the Manchester area. “When someone in your life has a diagnosis such as autism, you understand the significance when positive outcomes happen as a result of good services,” he said. “Early treatment is fundamental to improving the emotional and physical well-being of children with autism—it makes a significant difference in all aspects of their and their family’s lives.”

WHEN DARREN’S LIFE was irrevocably changed through a nasty collision with a moose, or when Jeremiah’s family changed course to meet an unexpected diagnosis of autism, they relied upon expertise provided by Crotched Mountain to successfully navigate new pathways of living. And while you may have met Darren and Jeremiah for the first time while reading this report, you have been a part of their lives for much longer. As a benefactor, you’re an equal partner in the delivery of every service we provide.

And that’s what philanthropy is all about: playing an active role in the wellbeing of neighbors and friends and people you may never meet. Philanthropy is the act of manifesting your caring and concern for others in tangible and meaningful ways—acts that enrich both benefactor and beneficiary.

Even though caring and compassion are free, the services to support the people we serve are not. Your investment enables us to continue to improve our methods of teaching, provide cutting edge communication technology, invest in breakthrough therapeutic models, and so much more. And it all culminates in meeting the real life needs of Darren, who now lives independently in his home community, and Jeremiah, who learns key skills to help him succeed at school and with his peers.

It is on their behalf, and the thousands more we serve each year, that we thank you for believing and investing in the work we do each day. Ours is a partnership that we do not take for granted, one worth our deepest thanks.

Volunteers

Each year we are privileged to receive the gift of volunteer time, energy and talent from individuals, businesses, groups and organizations. These volunteers play a big role in the lives of our students and clients in so many ways, and their service is an inspiration to us all. For their generous commitment, we thank each and every person and applaud the businesses and organizations that recognize the invaluable contributions of volunteers.

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Crotched Mountain is able to make our exceptional services and programs available to the thousands of children and adults we serve with the help of philanthropic support. If you would like to make a gift to help individuals with disabilities achieve their goals, we would be most grateful.

Many companies will match the generosity of employees who give to charitable organizations. If your company maintains a Matching Gift Program, your donation to Crotched Mountain could be doubled or even tripled. If you are interested, please see your human resources office for further information.

Help us help you. For more information about various ways to make a gift, including a personal illustration of the many favorable charitable tax advantages, please contact:

Guide to Consolidated Statement of Financial Position

Net Assets: Unrestricted net assets represent sources that are currently available for support of the operations of the Foundation and affiliates. Temporarily restricted net assets represent resources that may be expended by the Foundation based upon donor restrictions. Permanently restricted net assets represent funds restricted by the donor to be maintained by the Foundation in perpetuity.

The Foundation is the beneficiary of several irrevocable charitable perpetual trusts administered by others. In accordance with Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 116, Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made, the Foundation has recorded as an asset the fair market value of its interest in the trusts as of June 30, 2016, of $9.5 million and $9.7 million as of June 30, 2015.
