MICHELLE’S JOURNEY HOME, Ryan’s breakthrough in communication and learning... these stories open a window onto the unrivaled rehabilitative and educational services carried out each day at Crotched Mountain’s campus in Greenfield, New Hampshire, and in the wider community.

Look closer and you’ll find the people who make it their priority to build communities of mutual support through innovative education and rehabilitation services.

As you will read, Michelle and Ryan’s accomplishments are made possible through their own hard work and determination, facilitated by the support and dedication of highly-trained, skilled and passionate healthcare and education professionals. Each person Crotched Mountain serves is unique, as are the care and education plans we develop with them to reach their goals.

If not here, where?
While we make a commitment to provide the highest quality care, we are very pleased and honored to receive significant endorsement of that commitment from MCG (part of the Hearst Health network), a leading provider of evidence-based clinical care guidelines. Their prestigious national Doyle Award, awarded to just two organizations annually, recognized our innovative use of MCG’s clinical guidelines to improve care coordination and improve consistency in clinical decision-making while minimizing over-treatment.

We are proud to receive this award, but we won’t stop there. We know that ongoing innovation and discovery are essential to fulfilling our promise to serve as a source of strength and hope to thousands of people throughout their lives.

We will continue to make investments in classroom technology and environment to accommodate the unique needs of children with autism. Assistive technology such as interactive white boards, sound field systems and educational software all promote independent interfaces for learners with complex communication and movement needs. And with classrooms that are sensory-motor attuned to create safe, non-distracting settings, our specially trained educators have the tools needed to engage, encourage and educate our students.

We’re excited to expand our breadth of services with the Patient-Centered Integrative Care Program, which integrates evidence-supported complementary therapies such as mindfulness-based stress reduction and chiropractic care, into the rehabilitation process. We expect this broader, whole-person emphasis will improve outcomes for many of our patients with brain and spinal cord injuries, as well as other complex diagnoses. Clinical research methods will be employed to track the effectiveness of this expanded focus, which has been shown to benefit patients with chronic pain and anxiety, among other long-term problems.

Our community would be incomplete without people like you who support our mission to restore lives and renew hope. Because of you, Michelle and Ryan, and all who serve them, are able to find and explore new avenues for learning, for healing and for embracing life.

If not us, who?

Ryan McDonough, Explorer
Coming of Age

Safely and surely, growing and changing.

Ryan’s parents were looking for a school where he could enjoy the freedom to learn, grow and thrive.
When Ryan McDonough and his brothers Connor and Tommy were little, they all jumped into the same bed at night. Their parents read to them as they fell asleep before carefully moving them to their own beds, but “somehow they always ended up in the same bed,” says their mother, Annie. Born within five years of each other, the boys are a tight unit, and older Tommy and younger Connor became Ryan’s protectors when he began to show signs of autism.

Their roles changed when Ryan’s behaviors—destructiveness and running away—became so acute as to make living at home unsafe. His parents sought a school where Ryan could be watched more carefully while still enjoying the freedom to learn, grow and thrive. They scoured all the possibilities for Ryan near their home in Westford, Massachusetts, and, to their enormous relief, found Crotched Mountain.

“We wanted to keep him at home as long as possible,” Patrick McDonough says of his son, adding that he didn’t mind repairing walls, floors or ceilings that were objects of Ryan’s sometimes destructive behaviors. But, as Ryan grew up, several dangerous incidents convinced the McDonoughs that he needed a safer environment and close supervision.

When Ryan moved to Crotched Mountain School at age thirteen, the transition took a toll on the family. In addition to missing their brother, Tommy and Connor had to adjust to new roles. Their vigilance no longer required, they didn’t have to jump on their bikes to find him when he ran off, or look out for him at school. As for Ryan, his parents say even though he seemed to understand why a change was necessary, it wasn’t easy at first. “It was a challenging time for him,” says Annie, “and we weren’t used to being so far away physically, so it was a major transition for us, too.”

Three years have now passed, and during that time Ryan has seen his family on most weekends. During the week he has excelled at school, learning ways to cope with changes in routines and expectations that had often triggered destructive responses. Always active, he walks Crotched Mountain’s network of trails daily, swims in the pools at every opportunity, makes his own food choices and helps prepare his own meals. And he has formed strong bonds with staff and teachers. “Brian Rogers, his residential counselor, in particular really seems to get him,” Patrick says. “He’s constantly trying to figure out what makes Ryan tick.”

His heightened sensory awareness keeps Ryan from enjoying crowds, but he relishes his individual relationships with staff members. “One-on-one, he shows his sense of humor, his intelligence and cleverness,” says Annie. “He sees the staff as his friends, like ‘these are more than just my caretakers and teachers, they’re people I care about and are a big part of my life.’”

She has also noticed how Ryan’s photographic memory gives him remarkable computer skills, “remembering every keystroke that gives him access to YouTube and all the things he’s interested in.”

His mother is also struck by how he has learned to help manage the recycling program around the campus. “He likes challenges and can now independently do his job just the way they’ve taught him.” While Ryan is more settled, far less destructive and more advanced academically, Annie still wishes she could see him every day. But she notes that his absence makes the entire family’s hearts grow fonder. She says his brothers have grown closer to each other while understanding how much Ryan still needs them. They all look forward to their reunions. “Every time he comes home, it’s almost like Christmas,” Annie says.

Annie, a nurse who works in developmental services for adults, knows how well Ryan is cared for at Crotched Mountain School. “It’s a great staff. A great school. And the best place available for him,” she says. “Crotched Mountain teachers and staff see in Ryan what I see. They know him the way I know him and have such a sense of genuine care and concern.”

Having had their three children in a cluster, big changes are happening all at once for the McDonoughs. Annie feels both bittersweet and grateful for Ryan’s growth at Crotched Mountain. “Now when I’m about to leave him, he says, ‘Okay, yeah bye, see you Mommy.’ And I guess, my boys—all of them—are growing up.”

Ryan and his dad Patrick enjoy their time together. Both love the outdoors.
Michelle Maslanka
A Portrait of Tenacity, Courage and Love.

While she advanced quickly because of her positive attitude and eagerness to recover, Michelle’s family played a crucial role.
Once Michelle Maslanka set out on Crotched Mountain’s accessible trails this summer, she became an activist for others who use wheelchairs, determined to set up adaptive trails near her home in Laconia, New Hampshire. Determination burns deeply in Michelle, proven by the progress she has made since last summer when she lost control of her car with her six-year-old daughter, Rebecca, as a passenger. Her daughter survived with only minor injuries. But the accident left Michelle with a spinal cord injury and paralysis below the neck.

After six weeks at Spaulding Hospital in Charlestown, Massachusetts, Michelle regained some movement in her right arm and was referred to Crotched Mountain Specialty Hospital, where she showed remarkable tenacity and determination to heal.

Michelle had never been one to sit for very long. In addition to taking care of Rebecca, she gardened, was active in the community and worked a couple of part-time jobs, including one at a local chiropractic clinic.

“I’m a very outdoorsy person. I was up every day at six o’clock, and I don’t think I sat down for any length of time until after I put my daughter to bed at 8 p.m.,” she says. She was a woman on the go, and her attitude hasn’t changed.

“I keep going for my daughter and my husband,” Michelle says. Upon arriving at Crotched Mountain, physical therapy stood foremost in her mind. “I looked forward to it every day. And because I enjoyed it, I did three to four hours a day.” Plus, she took advantage of every other exercise offering.

As her strength began to improve and she regained movement in her arms, she dove into yoga classes and learned to bowl. “I really enjoyed those things that could take my mind off all the daily things I couldn’t do on my own,” Michelle says. She also began to regain sensation in the lower part of her body.

While training hard and making headway, winter set in, and Michelle’s spirits began to flag. Massive snowstorms hit, preventing her husband and daughter, who had seen her nearly every weekend, from visiting. Although Michelle had never stepped onto skis, she gathered the courage to hit the slopes—skiing with Crotched Mountain’s Adaptive Recreation and Sports program. “It was one of the greatest feelings I’ve ever had. I had said I wasn’t much of a thrill seeker; the staff, who were always in control of my descent through a tethering system, teased me because I was choosing the Black Diamond trails and taking on some scary moguls the first day.”

Michelle’s husband Brian Hook and daughter Rebecca have been instrumental in her progress.
For the first few months at Crotched Mountain, Michelle felt little impatience. “But once March came, spring fever hit, and I was ready to go home,” she says. She wanted to continue with therapy, and for more than a month before she left, her therapists prepared her for everyday living tasks like brushing her teeth and washing her hair. The staff also connected her with Granite State Independent Living, an organization that provides a caregiver at her home when she would otherwise be alone.

Seven-year-old Rebecca shares her mom’s energy and can-do spirit. “Rebecca enjoys helping out. She’s learned skills that are pretty sophisticated for a girl her age,” Michelle says. Her family makes it clear that she’s still very much needed at home, and she feels good that she can pitch in. “I have some adaptive silverware I use to feed myself, and I can help prep food for a meal. I do a lot of chopping.”

Her co-workers from Awakening Chiropractic have been attentive since her first days in the hospital. One of the chiropractors visited her every week at Spaulding. “My co-workers are a very special group of people. They’ve been amazingly supportive and have told me there’s a possibility I may be able to go back to working for them,” says Michelle.

She is convinced that she advanced more quickly because of her positive attitude and eagerness to recover. And she insists that others can do the same. “The therapists and staff at Crotched Mountain are wonderful. They provide everything you need. And if someone is willing to work, to get as much therapy as they can—and participate in everything—they will get there. It’s what you make of it.”

“I had said I wasn’t much of a thrill seeker; the staff teased me because I was choosing the Black Diamond trails and taking on some scary moguls the first day.”

OUR CAMPUS BASEBALL FIELD was dedicated to longtime supporter and Boston Red Sox Hall of Fame pitcher BILL MONBOUQUETTE and his wife JOSEPHINE before a gathering of family, friends and members of the Crotched Mountain community. Remembered fondly by sports fans throughout New England, Bill served as honorary chair of Crotched Mountain’s Annual Fund, and both he and Josephine were passionate ambassadors of the organization’s mission through decades-long generosity and service. In remarks to attendees, Donald Shumway, president and CEO at Crotched Mountain said, “We are honored to dedicate this baseball field to our friends Bill and Josephine Monbouquette. This field is a place where our students and staff members play, laugh and compete—and it’s at the center of a campus where students receive the critical health and educational services for which Bill and Josephine advocated so generously.” The field is now affectionately known as the MONBO BASEBALL FIELD.

Golf Classic Raises $60,000
The 13th Annual CROTCHE MOUNTAIN GOLF CLASSIC was a great success, raising over $60,000 for Crotched Mountain’s programs and services! The post-golf event highlighted improvements of care through new programs and advances, including new technology that our caring and expert staff use each day.

Exercise for Body and Mind
Crotched Mountain offered our Accessible Trail users an additional pleasure with story walks on the Dutton Brook and Gregg Trails. Pages of books were transformed into signs and laid out for hikers to follow along the trail. The pages were placed for easy reading access for children and people in wheelchairs. The book Around the Pond: Who’s Been Here? was posted on the Dutton Brook Trail, and In the Woods: Who’s Been Here? on the Gregg Trail. The books feature animals common to each trail. “The stories are colorful and interactive, offering clues on each page that relate to different animals, which allow hikers to learn more about local wildlife,” says ANITA MARTUS, teacher at CMS.

NH Champ Champions CM
Miss New Hampshire 2014 MEGAN COOLEY, whose platform is “Championing Abilities,” visited students, clients and staff at CM in February and skied with three participants during their CMARS (Crotched Mountain Accessible Recreation and Sports) adaptive ski lessons. “It was great to spend the day here and see first-hand CMARS’s dedication to serving children and adults of all abilities,” says Megan. Pictured with Megan is CMS student STEVEN.

Equine Friends Forever

CM’s Equine Collaborative finished its fourth year of programming, offering people of all abilities the chance to interact with a horse and perform simple tasks such as grooming, petting and leading. “Our Therapeutic Horse Experience sessions focus on the development of a relationship between a horse and an individual through ground-based activities and hands-on interactions,” says Gwenn Rumburg, an occupational therapist and coordinator of the Equine Collaborative at CM. “The responsibility of handling a horse can provide children and adults with a new level of self-esteem.” The collaborative staff works in tandem with the equine professionals and specially-trained horses from UpReach Therapeutic Equestrian Center in Goffstown. “It is a joyous moment when someone has an immediate, strong affinity with their horse companion and spontaneously expresses emotion,” says Kristen McGraw, UpReach program director.

Dance, Dance, Dance!

ACTIVE INGREDIENTS, the Crotched Mountain School adaptive dance troupe, hosted a spring recital in collaboration with the Monadnock Academy of Movement Arts of Peterborough, NH. “The Crotched Mountain adaptive dance program allows students of all abilities to perform collaboratively with other dancers and express the sense of joy that dancing brings them,” says Bonnie Arpin, CMS music teacher. “The Active Ingredients dancers are thrilled to share their love of dance with the audience and look forward to their recitals each spring and fall.”

CM Wild About Bruins Alumni

The BOSTON BRUINS ALUMNI laced up their skates in February for a game against the Crotched Mountain Wild, a team of employees and friends of CM, for the fifth Annual Bruins Alumni Classic at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, NH. The game, to benefit Crotched Mountain’s Accessible Recreation and Sports program (CMARS), raised nearly $32,000. CMARS provides hundreds of lessons each year to children and adults with disabilities to safely learn to ski and snowboard, kayak and canoe, cycle and hike and participate in other sports with the support of adaptive equipment and more than 60 trained volunteers. “For the fifth continuous year, we are very honored to support CMARS, which allows children and adults of all abilities to experience the thrill of racing down a ski slope, cycling a shady lane, paddling a kayak and other recreational activities,” says Rick Middleton, Bruins Alumni captain.

CM Outstanding In Forest Field

Crotched Mountain was delighted to be chosen the 2015 OUTSTANDING COMMUNITY TREE FARM OF THE YEAR by the New Hampshire Tree Farm Program. The award recognizes Crotched Mountain for its role as a working forest that serves to educate the public on sustainable forestry. Certified as a tree farm for the past 27 years, the property includes a total of 1,226 woodland acres located on the southerly aspect of Crotched Mountain.

I am pleased to take this opportunity to thank you, our donors and volunteers, for being an essential part of our unique community, which teaches, heals and inspires people who live with disabilities. Your contributions of time, talent and generous financial support play equal parts in the delivery of professional, innovative care and education provided each day on our campus and in the larger community. By making Crotched Mountain a philanthropic priority, you helped translate nearly $3.3 million into tangible milestones that removed barriers to education and rehabilitation. Here are just a few examples:

- A new initiative to benefit children like Chris, who has autism. We are integrating the CDC’s latest research with the most advanced clinical practices for Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA), an evidence-based treatment for children with a diagnosis of autism. Chris’ mom and dad are finally seeing him open up to the world around him.
- An exciting new program was developed to research integrating chiropractic and other forms of evidence-supported complementary therapies into more comprehensive treatments of patients with complex neurological conditions. Neuropathic, musculoskeletal and other painful conditions can limit the rehabilitation process and lead to complications associated with long-term opioid use.
- Classrooms utilizing Smartboards, iPads and advanced audio-visual technologies to boost inspiration and learning for students with a wide range of diagnoses. With his iPad and its word-predictive software, Andrew has made rapid achievements in both his adaptive communications and his own sentence structures.

All this, and much more, is within the core of our mission to provide essential care and education that can be found nowhere else. We cannot do this alone and are grateful to you for your critical role in supporting some of the most vulnerable members of our society.

Kathleen Cragin Brittan
Vice President of Development
We are deeply grateful to all those who choose to be a part of our commitment to children and adults with disabilities through their contributions to Crotched Mountain.

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Crotched Mountain continues to make exceptional services and programs available to thousands of children and adults each year. If you would like to make a gift to help individuals with disabilities achieve their goals, we would be most grateful.

Many companies will match the generosity of employees who give to charitable organizations. If your company maintains a Matching Gift Program, your donation to Crotched Mountain could be doubled or even tripled. If you are interested, please see your human resources office for further information.

Help us help you. For more information about various ways to make a gift, including a personal illustration of the many favorable charitable tax advantages, please contact:

Guide to Consolidated Statement of Financial Position

Net Assets: Unrestricted net assets represent sources that are currently available for support of the operations of the Foundation and affiliates. Temporarily restricted net assets represent resources that may be expended by the Foundation based upon donor restrictions. Permanently restricted net assets represent funds restricted by the donor to be maintained by the Foundation in perpetuity.

The Foundation is the beneficiary of several irrevocable charitable perpetual trusts administered by others. In accordance with Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 116, Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made, the Foundation has recorded as an asset the fair market value of its interest in the trusts as of June 30, 2015, of $9.7 million and $9.9 million as of June 30, 2014.
